

How York Drop & Add works

A visual walkthrough – every screen below is the real interface. Independent student project, not run by York University.

This is a snapshot. The interface may have changed since this PDF was generated – the current version and full FAQ are always at dropandadd.com/faq.html.

Browsing, before you sign in

The board is public. Anyone can see every open listing, grouped by course, with no account at all – signing in is only needed to post a listing or message someone.

Signing in with your YorkU email

No password to create. Type your @my.yorku.ca or @yorku.ca address and request a one-time link — any other domain is rejected before anything is sent.

York Drop & Add

Sign in with your YorkU email to post a listing or message someone. We'll send a one-time link — no password to remember.

YorkU email

Send magic link

By signing in, you agree we store your YorkU email to sign you in and let other students message you. Other students only ever see your display name — never your email.

Sign in screen

Confirming — link or code

Tapping the emailed link signs you in directly. On a phone, mail apps can sometimes break that handoff, so the same email carries a short numeric code as a fallback — type it into this screen instead.

Your account

The corner button now reads Account. From here you can change your display name (what other students see — never your email), jump to your messages, sign out, or permanently delete your data.

"Delete my data" removes your display name, every listing you've posted, and every conversation you're part of — right away, permanently.

Messaging someone, or removing your own listing

Every card on the board is a button, and it already knows which listings are yours. A card someone else posted says Message — tapping it opens a conversation about that exact course and section. A card you posted says Remove in red instead, and asks you to confirm before deleting it — permanently, with no undo.

A live conversation

Messaging is real-time. Once you open a conversation, replies from the other student appear immediately — no refreshing needed.

Re: LE/EECS 2030 · LECT 01, LAB 03

You two coordinate here — the actual change happens in REM.

Jordan

Hey! Saw you need a seat in my EECS 2030 lecture — I'm dropping it since I switched into an earlier lab.

You

That's great, I really need this one for my prereq. When are you planning to drop?

10:05 AM

Jordan

Thursday morning, once add/drop opens back up. I'll message you right before so you can jump on it in REM.
